Colour In George Villiers

George Villiers, the First Duke of Buckingham, grew up at Goadby Hall. He was an important man who lived in England over 400 years ago. He started out as an ordinary person, but he became very close friends with King James I and later helped his son, King Charles I.

Because the kings liked him so much, George was given fancy titles, lots of money, and became one of the most powerful people in the country. He helped the kings make big choices about wars and the government, though not everyone thought he did a good job. Some people even blamed him when things went wrong.

George Villiers was known for being handsome, confident, and wearing stylish clothes. His life ended sadly when someone who didn't like him killed him, but his story shows how friendship with a king could change someone's life completely.
